Another Fourth of July has come and grone. Still most of us are alive neither burned nor maimed as some unfortunates are. Perhaps it is unreasonable to expect in a country ag big as ours that the Fourth will wholly escape mishaps of this character. We are however, escaping one thing that was very common in the days of our fathers, and that was the set Fourth of July oration. I mean that ofotund, yet heavy, style or oratory of the Webster-Everett-Phillips class, which required, at least, two full hours for defiliery on a burning mid-summer day. The topics in those days surely sounded great. They were Our Glorious Heritage. The Triumphs of Democracy, The It is something of a novelty these days great. They were Our Glorious Heri-tage. THE STUDY OF MT. KATMAI IN ALASKA.

Mankind's debt to the volcano has been more fully recognized by results of recent recearches. Contrary to the popular belief that the volcano is an emmy it is one of mankind's best friends. Without volcanoes it now is believed there would be no ocean; and to them we reseindebted for carbon dioxide, wit, at which human life would not be possible.

One of the most tremendous volcanic explosions in history was that of Mt, Katrasi, in Alaska.

In. Robert F. Griggs, headed the National Geographic Society's expeditions to study Katmal and was the discoverer of its neighbor natural wonder, the Valley of Ten Thousand smokes.

discoverer of its neighbor natural wonder, the Valley of Ten Thousand smokes.

Though unaware of the mighty upheaval, every inhabitant of the United States felt its effects; one of which was the cold, damp summer of 1913 caused by the interception of so much sunlight by the dust from the eruption which quickly was carried around the world. Even in cloudless Sahara the sky was overcast; and it is believed that a succession of such eruptions could plungs the earth into another lee age.

Katmai's terrific explosion was unnoticed because it was so remote. Had the upheaval occurred in New York City the sulphurous fumes would have polluted the air everywhere east of the Rodsy mountains; the noise would have reverberated like an artillery duel across the central States; and the lower Hudson itself would have been a giant tomb with few ruins even to tell the story.

Fortunately Katmai's eruption provided geographers one of their greatest opportunities for studying volcanic phenomena without any frightful toil of human misery. Katmai Village, twenty miles from the crater, was descreted because all the natives had gone fishing, according to their summer custom.

WALK IN THE LIGHT

But if we walk in the light, we have fallowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son cleanseth us from all sin. I John 1.7. Do we not need above all things to be assured that all our darkness comes from within or from our immediate surroundings and that we can if we will rise above it into an atmosphere where ill is light.

Everyone knows that his life is not all that it should be, his character not so noble as it might be; even theu he try to convince himself to the contrary, and his plea would not bear his only candid investigation, therefore he is condemned by his own conscience. whereshouts, as the police bulletins would say, still is a mystery to scientists.

The aftermath of this eruption promises to be one of our most precious national heritages. Beyond Katmai lies a great valley from whose fibor constantly ascende millions of solumns of steam. These great rolling clouds of vapor which go billowing down the valley, sometimes trailing out before the wind a mile or more exert an uncanny fascination.

The fumaroles, or vents, through which the steam escapes, disclose encrustations of greatest beauty, variety and color. There are masses of bright yellow sulphur, chunks of ash turned red and blue, and pure white masses of silicious material.

You can cook your dinner over these jets of histing steam, though you have to hold the frying pan down against the uprushing stream. There is a natural bathing pool, one end cold and another hot. Not far away is a lake with trout of thirty inches or more that bite at almost anything and there also is Brooks Falls with its leaping salmon which may be speared when a trout diet palls.

President Wilson turned aside from the stress of war time to make this region a national minument. Some day it will be a national park—second in area only to Yellowstone. Many lesser phenomena mark the vicinity. There is falling mountain, for example, which needs not, a motion picture camera but a phonograph or a radio to record its thunderous subsidence. Magnificent forests will provide a game preserve. Novarupta, a nearby wicano, now wells her crater is relieved.

Merimee's Letters to an Incognita. The love letters of Prosper Merimee addressed to "Incognita," have always attracted a great deal of attention through the fact that the young lady to whom they were written has never been identified, and many of the writer's friends, piqued because he had not confided in them, insists that there was no secret to tell, for "Incognita" was a myth, and the "Incognita" was a myth, and the letters a romance with which some pretty details of actual life had been woven to

The following is an especially clear extract: "You jest in saying so charmingly that you are afraid of me. or through mistake. Just glance over today for instance i yous and know that things have seemed to go wrong. And you probably have scolded the children for doing things that made you trouble or work. But did they really mean to? Julla tore her new gingham dress climbing a tree to rescue Muggins, the pet kitty. Now Julia didn't say "I'm go-ing to climb this tree and tear my dress hecause mother isn't looking." But she came along home from school and saw poor kitty yewling from the topmost branch, where Fido had chased her. And in Julia's heart was just one desire—to help her pet down. She acted on impulse and not because she intended to disobey. keep up the mystification.

There must be no hit-and-miss obedience. To spank a child one day for loitering and then go off to the club the next day and leave her to wander about as she pleases after school is not consistent discipline and any child soon realizes this Constant obedience, becomes instinctive habit, and the success of the whole system depends on starting in time to discipline and maintain a steady hand ever though it sometimes is inconvient for the
